

Elizabeth Thomas, Headmistress

Elizabeth was previously Head of Stonar School in Wiltshire. She was educated in several countries and is a graduate of Lancaster University, where she read English. Her professional training was at Bath University and the National College of School Leadership, where she gained the National Professional Qualification for Headship.

She taught English in the maintained sector for several years and spent a number of years running a training consultancy providing services to a range of major companies. Returning to teaching she then moved to the independent sector in 1996. She worked for ten years at Luckley-Oakfield School in Berkshire where she held a variety of posts including Head of English, SENCO, Head of Sixth Form and Academic Development Director before being appointed as Deputy Head at Leighton Park School where she was also Acting Head in 2009.

She is Chair of the GSA East Region and member of GSA Council, having previously served as Vice Chair of the GSA Education Committee and is a Team Inspector for the Independent Schools Inspectorate.

Elizabeth is married to Andrew, an accountant and has one daughter, a doctor, who was educated in an independent girls' school. Elizabeth is an avid reader who enjoys going to the theatre, taking long walks in the country and attempting to keep her garden in shape.
